Designing for Resilience and Renewal: Case Studies in Sustainable and Human-Centered School Design

Liz Szatko Perez, AIA

Liz Szatko Perez, AIA, is an Associate Architect at DLR Group in Seattle, where she specializes in K-12 education design and sustainable building strategies. With a Bachelor of Science in Architecture from the University of Nebraska–Lincoln and a Master of Architecture from the University of Michigan, Liz brings strong technical expertise in design, graphics, and digital modeling, combined with a deep commitment to creating learning environments that support student wellbeing, flexibility, and community engagement. Her work at DLR Group includes serving school districts across more than 40 districts in New York and the Pacific Northwest, where she advances design solutions that balance occupant health, safety, and environmental responsibility.
